MT. STERLING, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, JULY 25. 1906.

NUMBER 2

AN ACT

To Promote the Sheep Industry and Provide A Tax On Dogs.

Be it enacted by the General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Kentucky,

1. Each year every dog over four months old shall be listed for taxation as herein provided, either by the owner or by the assessor in the name of the owner, without fixing any valuation thereto. Provided, The owner may, if he so desires, affix any value thereto he wishes. Every person who keeps or harbors a dog, or who knowingly permits the keeping or harboring of a dog upon his premises, shall, for the purpose of listing and taxation, be deemed the owner thereof; and the assessor and his deputies shall ascertain the owner or harborer of each dog within his territory, and list and return the same by magisterial districts. The Auditor shall provide blank spaces in assessors' books and schedules, and the assessor, in listing a dog, shall enter its description upon the schedule, stating the kind, sex, age, color, size and name, if any.

2. The owner of every dog over four months of age shall pay a license tax thereon of one dollar. The first assessment under this act shall be made in the year 1906, between the fifteenth day of September and the thirty-first day of December. Said license tax shall be due and collectible as other taxes, and collected by the sheriff and reported to the Auditor and paid to the Treasurer, but the sheriff shall keep such license tax on dogs separate from other funds, and so report to the Auditor and pay to the Treasurer, and the Treasurer and Auditor shall keep separate accounts of such taxes by counties. The amount collected by license tax on dogs shall be used to indemnify losses by the killing or injuring of sheep by dogs, as herein provided.

3. Whenever any sheep are killed or injured by dogs, the owner or person having custody of same shall, without delay and within twenty-four hours after such killing or injury is made known to him, notify the magistrate in whose district the sheep are located and make affidavit setting forth the number of sheep killed and the number injured, the kind, grade or quality, amount and nature of injury thereto, and that such damage was not caused in whole or in part by a dog owned or harbored by him, and that he does not know whose dog caused the damage, or, if known, and such account reduced to judgment could not be collected on execution. The magistrate shall then appoint two disinterested and discreet freeholders of the neighborhood where the injury was done, to appraise the damage, and shall furnish them with claimant's affidavit or a copy thereof, and the appraisers shall forthwith examine such sheep, and make a written report on the claim to the magistrate, who shall forthwith forward the claimant's affidavit and the appraiser's report to the county clerk, together with his recommendation endorsed thereon. The clerk shall file same in his office and endorse thereon the date of such filing. The magistrate and each of the appraisers shall be allowed fifty cents for their services, to be paid out of the dog tax fund of such county as other claims.

4. At each meeting of the fiscal court the claims for loss or damage to sheep, which have been filed not less than thirty days prior to such meeting, shall be taken up and considered, and rejected, or, if correct and just, allow the same, or such parts thereof as may be deemed right. Provided, That the fiscal court may require additional evidence on any such claims, either by oral testimony or affidavits. Such claims as are allowed shall be filed with the Auditor, who shall, after the first of January of each year, take up all such claims by counties, and draw up his warrants upon the Treasurer in favor of claimant for the amount allowed by the fiscal court. Provided, If the amount of the dog tax fund to the credit of any county be not sufficient to pay all claims for such county, the Auditor shall pro rata the claims from such county. Any surplus remaining to the credit of a county after all such claims are allowed shall be transferred to the credit of the school fund of such county.

5. Every person owning or harboring a dog shall be liable to the party injured for all damages done by such dog; but no recovery shall be had for personal injuries to any person when they are upon the premises of the owner of the dog after night, or upon the owner's premises engaged in some unlawful act in the day time. Whenever re-covey is had before any court for damages to sheep by a dog, the court may order the defendant to kill or cause to be killed such dog within two days after the rendition of the judgment.

6. Any dog returned for taxation and the tax on which is paid when due, shall be regarded as property and shall be entitled to same protection as live stock. The owner of any dog listed for taxation which may be injured or killed contrary to law, or carried or enticed away from the premises of the owner or harborer, for the purpose of killing or injuring such animal, or depriving the owner thereof, may recover exemplary damages of the person for so killing or injuring or enticing away such dog: Provided, That, in the trial of any action for damages arising under this section it shall be competent to offer in evidence whether in listing such dog any value was affixed by the owner and the amount of such valuation. And any person violating the provisions of this section shall be liable to prosecution as in case of injuring any live stock or personal property of another.

7. Any owner or harborer of a dog, subject to be taxed, who shall fail or refuse to list same with the assessor, shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $10 for each dog he so fails or refuses to list for taxation; and any person who shall keep or harbor a dog upon his premises or elsewhere, and who fails or refuses to pay tax thereon when due, shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $25 for each offense and, upon conviction, the judgment may include an order requiring such dog to be killed, which order may be executed by any peace officer, who shall be allowed $1 therefor, to be taxed as costs. It shall be the duty of the sheriff and his deputies, and each constable in his district, to kill or cause to be killed any dog, the owner of which has failed or refused to pay the tax thereon when due, and for each dog so killed, without the order of a court, such officer shall be allowed by the fiscal court fifty cents, to be paid out of the dog tax fund. For the purpose of this act, the tax on dogs shall be considered due on the first day of March of each year: Provided however, The sheriff may collect such tax at any time and in such a manner as taxes are now collectible by law.

8. If any person shall wilfully poison any dog not his own, and upon the premises of the one so poisoning, shall be fined not less than $5 nor more than $25. Any person violating the provisions of this section shall be liable in damages for any dog poisoned thereby. But nothing herein shall be construed to affect or render invalid any ordinance of any city providing for killing dogs running at large.

9. A justice of the peace, on proof that any dog is mad, or has been bitten by a mad dog, or has killed or wounded any sheep, shall order such dog to be killed; and the officer who executes the order shall be paid one dollar by the owner of the dog and collected as costs. If any person shall conceal a dog so ordered to be killed, or prevent the execution of the order, he shall be fined $5 for every day he shall offend. Any mad dog or dogs having the disease known as the "rabies" may be killed by any person.

10. That an act, entitled "An act to amend chapter 29, General Statutes," approved May 17, 1886, be, and the same is hereby repealed, and all laws in conflict with this act are, to the extent of such conflict, hereby repealed.

Approved March 1, 1906.

LAWS REGULATING

The Granting or Cancellation of Liquor Licenses.

WHO WILL ENFORCE THE LAW

Who Are the Guardians of The Peace and Good Name of Our City?

Mt. Sterling is a city of the Fourth Class.

Under the heading, Municipal Corporations, Fourth Class—Legislative Department, Section 8490, subsection 27, on page 1285 of the Kentucky Statutes, we read the following which at this time and under existing conditions, is interesting and instructive:

27. Liquors—license, regulation or restraint of sale—fee. The council shall have power, by ordinance, to license, permit, regulate or restrain the sale of all kinds of vinous, spirituous or malt liquors within the limits of the city, or to restrain or prohibit the sale thereof within one mile of the limits thereof, provided nothing herein shall be construed as granting the power or right to one town or city to license, permit, regulate, restrain or prohibit the sale of spirituous, vinous or malt liquors in any other town or city, and may fix the penalty or fine for violation of an ordinance under this section at any sum not exceeding one hundred dollars: Provided, That no license to sell such liquors, to be drunk on the premises where sold, granted under this section, shall be for a less amount than two hundred and fifty dollars nor for a greater amount than one thousand dollars. For license to sell same by retail, for medical purposes, they may charge not less than fifty dollars nor more than five hundred dollars. For license to sell same by retail in quantities not less than a quart they may charge not less than one hundred dollars, nor more than five hundred dollars. The board of council shall, at any time, have the power and authority to refuse to grant any license, and to suspend or revoke any license granted under or by virtue of the authority conferred by this section, when the board shall deem it necessary so to do in order to preserve the peace or good morals of said town, and said board of council shall be the exclusive judges of the necessity.

What Does The Saloon Stand For? Editor Advocate:

After reading the report of the convention of liquor dealers I have come to the conclusion that the saloon business is doomed. It plainly shows that the saloonists were very much in need of practical points when they declared that drinking beer is temperance. This assertion will have no weight with the farmers because they know it is a willful lie. Saloonists cannot describe their infernal institution. It has been described—especially by their customers.

In first place, what does the American saloon stand for? Does it make men pure in thought, faithful, chaste and beautiful? Does it sanctify the home and sweep the soul heavenward in its aspirations for everlasting righteousness? The liquor dealer would say yes but we know he is lying.

We know that the American saloon is the place where candidates for hell are made. It destroys the body and damns the soul. It is the trap that catches the youth; it is the wreck of manhood and despair of old age. It populates the poor houses and asylums and crowds the penitentiaries. It brights the sweetest roses of charity. It is the greatest force for evil out of hell. The work of the saloon is darkness in the home, a cloud in the church and night in the soul of man. Three-fourths of the poverty and crime comes from the whiskey bottle.

What is the saloon's position in the political field? Do they want the best men sent to congress? Do they have any respect for law?

No. They work against purity.

The saloon demoralizes the ballot, bribes justice and legislation, assassinates law and poisons and debauches society. How many of our prominent men ever visited in the saloon when they were boys? Not any. The saloon is a menace to society. It places man below the level of the brutes. It has no place under the stars and stripes.

Local Option vs. Licensed Saloons To Whom It May Concern:

THE STATE OF KENTUCKY,
COUNTY OF HILL.

This is to certify that after a careful inspection and close examination of the records of the Corporation and other Courts of Hubbard City, Texas, for two years immediately preceding and for two years immediately subsequent to the opening of saloons in said city the following is a correct statement and true comparison of the criminal cases appearing on the dockets of said courts during said time:

FIRST—Before the legalized sale of whisky and under local option, beginning April 1st, 1898, and terminating June 1st, 1900:

Drunkness, disturbing peace, affrays, etc., 54; other miscellaneous offenses, 28; total cases under local option for two years, 82.

SECOND—After the repeal of local option and under the licensed saloon system, beginning June 1st, 1900, and terminating June 1st, 1902:

Drunkness, disturbing peace, affrays, etc., 212; other miscellaneous offenses, 70; total cases under licensed saloons for two years, 282; increase under saloons for two years, 200.

During the SIX years of local option immediately preceding the victory of the Antis in 1900, there was filed in all said courts combined only 317 cases or 33 cases less than was filed for only TWO years of legitimate traffic in liquor.

Witness my hand this 2d day of June, A. D. 1902.

Saloons That Kill the Liquor Business.

"Down here in Kentucky we have distilleries worth many millions, and stocks in bond worth say $50,000,000, and a good will in the reputation of this State for making fine whisky that is so great an asset that we do not know how to place a value upon it, yet we are assured by men within the trade who are watching the progress of events that the time is near at hand when in 112 out of 119 counties in Kentucky it will be unlawful to ship whisky wine, or beer, or to offer it for sale—and this because the saloon business is conducted contrary to the views of the general public and because the accusations made against the legitimate wine and spirit trade, being unanswered, stands for truth.

It's a great mistake to shut our eyes to facts or our ears to truths, and this is what we are doing when we stand sponsor for saloons that disregard law; saloons that sell their customers beer or whisky until reason is overthrown; saloons that we would shudder at our boys visiting; saloons that we would oppose in our own neighborhood; saloons that bring our business into disrepute and from which spring the tremendous movements that threaten to overwhelm our trade; and we are failing utterly to exercise the right of self-defense when we neglect to make war on resorts of this character and to offer to legislatures, and to city councils, suggestions as to how the retail liquor business may be elevated and the men connected with it encouraged to reform it in every particular."

The above is from a whiskey journal, and was reported at the recent Louisville Convention, of Wholesale Liquor Dealers. They concede even more than the most enthusiastic temperance advocates dare to even hope.—The Kentucky Issue.

Things are coming our way. Whiskey men are helping us. Three men shot in one saloon, a gambling game in another, and boys 14 and 17 drunk on our streets tell.—Ed. Advocate.

SICKNESS IN MT. STERLING

More Cases of Illness This Spring Than in Former Years.

Physicians and druggists say there are more cases of illness in Mt. Sterling this Spring than in former years. Perhaps there is not so much serious sickness, but Spring languor, loss of appetite, headaches, sleeplessness, back-aches, weakness and debility, indigestion and other ills that result from indigestion or an overworked stomach, are more common than they have been for some years past.

This has resulted in an unusual demand for Mi-o-ne stomach tablets at W. S. Lloyd's. Before he felt that he could recommend this remedy, he tested it rigidly in many cases of heart-burn, indigestion, wind on the stomach, debility, and other troubles that result from a weakened digestion, with the greatest success.

In fact, Mi-o-ne has been unusually successful in curing all stomach troubles that W. S. Lloyd's gives a signed guarantee with every 50c box to refund the money if it does not cure. 52-62.

To vote saloons out of your town is a sure way to boom it, but to keep them in town is to place a boom-e-rang in the municipal band which only results in shooting arrows with poisoned heads not only into the legal and financial affairs of the town, but into the most sacred institutions and the happiest homes.—Kentucky Issue.

ABODES HAVE LITTLE HEAT | PRINCESS WAS A TOMBOY.

People of Genoa, Italy, Enjoy Temperature Which Would Chill the Average American.

The Genoese are not accustomed to the artificial high temperature which we maintain in America. Their houses, in fact, are constructed to contend entirely with summer heat and not with winter cold, being all built of stone, with enormously thick walls, floors of marble mosaic, ceilings from 10 to 15 feet high, and inner partition walls nearly two feet thick. A diminutive open fireplace, a ridiculously small oil stove or nothing but a little charcoal brazier is depended on to warm a vast room which is sumptuous in everything but comfort as we understand the word, says the New York Herald.

Hotels, even of the best class, are very slow in being provided with the so-called "central heating," while some of the finest old palaces are warmed no better today than they were when erected centuries ago. Churches, public buildings, theaters and halls make no pretense of being heated at all.

Such being the case, and the native people wholly indifferent to a winter temperature which chills an American, the demand for stoves is naturally not very lively among them; but there are some 3,000 or 4,000 foreigners living here, and all fairly well to do, besides the thousands of travelers constantly coming and going, all of whom prefer better heated houses and hotels. The Genoese himself enjoys the outdoor air and puts on heavier clothing only when he comes inside his "marble halls."

Geologist Asserts Growing Mountain Ranges Are Source of Danger on Pacific Coast.

Disquieting to dwellers on the Pacific seaboard, and profoundly interesting to the geologists, are the remarkable conclusions drawn by Dr. C. Davidson, who is an authority on the topic of earthquakes, from the San Francisco disaster. He says that in the western United States we are presented with mountains in four stages of growth. In the Rockies we have ranges so ancient that they have almost ceased to grow; the Sierra Nevada another which is approaching old age; the coast ranges are in the stage of youthful vigorous growth, with the possibility of long and active growth before them; while still further to the west, and not yet risen above the ocean there seems to be an embryonic range of which the San Francisco and other earthquakes are the birth throes. When the city on the beautiful San Francisco harbor comes to celebrate its millionth anniversary its people may be able to confirm or disprove this geologic forecast.

One Year's Liquor Bill.

Miss Marie Brehm, president of Illinois W. C. T. U. authority for the following:

"If I had the spending of the liquor bill of the U. S. for one year, I could build a city of ten thousand homes and put into each, $1,000 worth of furniture. I could give to every drunkard in the U. S. $100, to the wife of every drunkard a new dress and a suit of clothes to all their children. I could add an extra $1,000 to the salary of every minister of the gospel in the U. S. give $250,000 to each state and territory for education, and $50,000 to each for libraries, and then have enough left to give to every man, woman and child in the U. S. a $5 gold piece."

Men Who Seek Employment 365 Days in the Year.

We quote from the Reporter of our city, the following on July 16:

"No chain can possibly be stronger than its weakest link. No race can possibly be stronger than its weakest members.

"While we have to certain extent boasted of our Great and Good men are unparalleled success, we have you remember that every day has its clouds, every rose has its thorns and every racets thong. The careless and unconcerned Negro tend to place the rest of the race in a bad light with the other race. The charge that we are immoral is a strong point made against us by our enemies. Those members of our race who take no thought as to what to morrow will bring forth, those who stay on the streets from morning till night, one day after another, who never seek employment of any kind, whose highest ambition is to be able to inhale the smoke of cigarettes or swear very fluently and engage in brawling, are the weak links in our racial chain. Since these characters are always seen by the other people, they conclude that the best of the race countenance the conduct of these persons. By these characters we are judged. In this article we would have you understand that it is as much impossible for one of our race to suffer without all suffering as it is for one member of the body to suffer independently of the others. Since this is true let us begin to mend the broken links in this chain and to repair the broken parts. You certainly will not charge us of hyperbole when we say there are some weak members in our race. Yes, weak along all lines. I need not point out the weak ones but we can better have you see the weak ones by pointing out to you the strong.

To make out of the weak members of the race strong ones will require an individual effort on the part of every member of the race."

BY IDA SHEPHERD.

(Copyright, 1906, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)
McQuire languidly watched the smoke curl from his cigar, play in weaving circles about his shapely face and head, then float off to the realms of pipe dreams. Presently a dreamy, satisfied smile stole into his blue eyes. He was so sure of her truth, in integrity and love for himself, Adorable Lora. He was hastening back to her and their wedding day at steamer speed. Too long had he strayed from her heart, her caresses, her perfect arms.

"What?" she nearly shrieked; "marry a pauper?" Bah, he hasn't brains enough to get a first client. Me do kitchen work and make my own clothes, for love sake? Well, hardly. I have an offer of marriage from old Swift. He's no fool to trust his money to such men as Parkin. Son. I will accept his offer, and send back poor Phil the engagement ring. It will bring him several hundred dollars. He needs that now worse than he does love."

"But, Lora, Sniff is 75," ventured Rainey.

"Wish it were 95, then I'd be sooner rid of him."

"When he dies, of course you will marry me? You know that it will be you have always loved best, Lora. Pity you and I were born honest, but poor."

For an answer Lora playfully tapped his cheek with McQuire's letter. Then ordered him home, as she must go to her room and think out its answer.

Phil was nearly a month getting over everything that followed that letter. At the end of that time he was as good as new. McQuire's cigar dropped from his parted lips. The red leaped in an ugly flame to his face. They were talking, these friends of his, of the girl he was to marry. His right hand opened to slap little Rainey fair in his calamitating mouth. Larkin's answer came slowly, between puffs at his pipe: "McQuire is young. She isn't good enough for him, that's only too true. But, Rainey, the girl was only a little reckless, too much of a flirt. Nothing worse. Lambert is a liar. His word don't go for a fillip. The girl is pure if she does like money too well, even to the point of pretending love for it. Then, it may not be pretense. McQuire's a good looker and nobody's fool, if he was born to revel in gold."

"Lora would not marry any man unless he brought her gold." Rainey still persisted. "Oh, you need not worry about shutting the door; McQuire is on the deck. I saw him go up an hour ago." McQuire fidgeted and worried about his cabin for an hour after. Not a doubt of Lora's love edged itself in his mind. No one but himself had ever possessed her heart. Of that he was sure. Gold, why how often she had wished that he would lose his money, that she might be the better show her disinterested love for her brother.

From New York McQuire wrote a brief letter to Lora:

"My dearest: I'm viewing the hole where it has all gone down. You no doubt have heard of the Parkinson company crash? The private fortunes they swamped with their own stupendous failure? I have trusted Parkinson as I might have my father, had I one at present. Well, I'm not going to cry over spilled milk. It's done, and can't be helped. I can work for my darling. I have youth, health, strength and love left. You know I studied law. Behold a future Webster in your husband. I cannot wait to see you. Lovingly, Phil."

Rainey was with Lora when she received this epistle. He watched her pretty face turn pale, then flushed. She played nervously with the costly diamond ring McQuire had given her. Rainey, searching her face, asked:

"Of course it's love in a cage?"

"Of course it isn't," she flared. "It is a fact that he was fool enough to trust his immense fortune in the keeping of that company he refers to?"

"Guess he did. He was tolerably frank about the matter. He is playing cheerful to you in this letter. He believes that nothing would separate your love from him."

"Wish it were 95, then I'd be sooner rid of him."

"When he dies, of course you will marry me? You know that it will be you have always loved best, Lora. Pity you and I were born honest, but poor."

For an answer Lora playfully tapped his cheek with McQuire's letter. Then ordered him home, as she must go to her room and think out its answer.

Phil was nearly a month getting over everything that followed that letter. At the end of that time he was as good as new.

McQuire's cigar dropped from his parted lips. The red leaped in an ugly flame to his face. They were talking, these friends of his, of the girl he was to marry. His right hand opened to slap little Rainey fair in his calamitating mouth. Larkin's answer came slowly, between puffs at his pipe: "McQuire is young. She isn't good enough for him, that's only too true. But, Rainey, the girl was only a little reckless, too much of a flirt. Nothing worse. Lambert is a liar. His word don't go for a fillip. The girl is pure if she does like money too well, even to the point of pretending love for it. Then, it may not be pretense. McQuire's a good looker and nobody's fool, if he was born to revel in gold."

"Lora would not marry any man unless he brought her gold." Rainey still persisted. "Oh, you need not worry about shutting the door; McQuire is on the deck. I saw him go up an hour ago."

McQuire fidgeted and worried about his cabin for an hour after. Not a doubt of Lora's love edged itself in his mind. No one but himself had ever possessed her heart. Of that he was sure. Gold, why how often she had wished that he would lose his money, that she might be the better show her disinterested love for her brother.

After awhile the plan he would work to confute these friends came crowding itself into his head. It was neither new or original, but it would do.

Rainey was with Lora when she received this epistle. He watched her pretty face turn pale, then flushed. She played nervously with the costly diamond ring McQuire had given her. Rainey, searching her face, asked:

"Of course it's love in a cage?"

"Of course it isn't," she flared.

"It is a fact that he was fool enough to trust his immense fortune in the keeping of that company he refers to?"

"Guess he did. He was tolerably frank about the matter. He is playing cheerful to you in this letter. He believes that nothing would separate your love from him."

"What?" she nearly shrieked; "marry a pauper?" Bah, he hasn't brains enough to get a first client. Me do kitchen work and make my own clothes, for love sake? Well, hardly. I have an offer of marriage from old Swift. He's no fool to trust his money to such men as Parkin. Son. I will accept his offer, and send back poor Phil the engagement ring. It will bring him several hundred dollars. He needs that now worse than he does love."

"But, Lora, Sniff is 75," ventured Rainey.

"Wish it were 95, then I'd be sooner rid of him."

"When he dies, of course you will marry me? You know that it will be you have always loved best, Lora. Pity you and I were born honest, but poor."

Editha Misses the Train.

BY FRANCIS H. MELON.

Copyright, 1896, by Daily Press Pub. Co.

When it comes to secrets of the heart, what woman is not more than half clairvoyant? So it was that Miss Editha Loring Jones, daughter of a baronet of England, had guessed, though snow-bound by a hyper-conventional chaperone, the love that plain John Paul—proudly an American—bore her.

It was true that Mrs. Orangea Whelpley, the chaperone, relief of the late Maj. Whelpley, who had obtained his final discharge at Calcutta from the hand of the world's greatest commercial general, had been strictly charged by Miss Editha's father to see that no upstart Yankee had ought to do with the young lady's affections.

It was also true that Miss Editha had sighed more than once at the difference of freedom enjoyed by the American and the English girl. If she had been born in America, she reflected, she would not have had the company of Mrs. Orangea Whelpley forced upon her. Young people are meant for young people's company, and so Editha's heart went out to plain John Paul Plain? Well, he had won a degree at college, and as the leading lawyer of the little western town of Openvale, he had sent to the state senate, so that many of his letters were properly addressed to "Hon. John Paul." But he cared little for titles, being willing to dispense with even the ordinary "Mr."

As even the strictest chaperone can't make one a prisoner, it happened on an August day that when John Paul ran his new 20 horsepower car to the edge of the platform of Openvale depot, Miss Editha Loring Jones, dainty in all the feminine "fixings," came with outstretched hand to bid him farewell.

"It's going to seem mighty lonesome out here after you're gone," he announced, mournfully, when the first greeting was over.

"At least, we can say good-by without that horrid Mrs. Whelpley straining her ears to catch our last words, as if one could talk of nothing but love, love, love!"

"Why, where is Mrs. Whelpley?"

She's got aboard the train. She's horribly afraid of being left, so she's taken the tickets for both of us and secured our seats. I've no doubt she's in fidgets, but she won't care to leave, although the train stops ten minutes."

"Let's sit in the auto while we make our adieux," John suggested.

Editha complied.

"I was saying," he went on, "it's going to be mighty lonesome out here after you've gone. You see, I've got so accustomed to seeing you every day that not to see you will be like missing the sun from its accustomed place in the sky."

The girl laughed with forced merriment.

"If you lived in London," she retorted, "you'd get used to missing the sun, as I have no doubt you will in Openvale."

"Ab, no; the sun is too dear to us in California; it's the state of sunshine, you know, just as your city of London is the city of eternal fog. Why," he continued, "in fact, the place is never going to seem the same without you, Editha!"

The girl's face flushed. He had never called her Editha before. What would Mrs. Whelpley say?

It was not "conventional, but—

"Our time is short," he said, glancing at his watch. "But if I speak hastily, I have time to tell you something you may care to hear, though I hardly dare hope you will."

The flush on the girl's face deepened, and her head was inclined forward, so that the rim of her picture hat was hidden.

"If I should miss that train—" she interrupted, nervously.

"Hang the train!" exclaimed the young lawyer, savagely. "Listen to me!" There was a new note of command in his voice, and Editha appeared resigned. Like most girls, she favored masculine men.

"In a few minutes, Editha, the train may—" "Ah, it?" she wondered—"be whirling you eastward, away from the land where I and my ancestors before me for three generations have struggled to amass the little fortune that has come to us. Your lineage, I know, dates back to the time of the Conqueror, and your circle of society is the most exclusive in the world.

"See how far apart we are," he went on. "Only circumstance has thrown us together, and circumstance perhaps?" "Perhaps?" she wondered again—"in about to separate us. Until you came I enjoyed the wild, free life of my country. I partook of all its pleasures with a joy that saw no future when I should love and the girl I loved should be beyond my possession.

"This is changed now. For, Editha,"—his voice trembled as only the voice of a very strong man can tremble under the suppression of strong emotion—"you must know that I love you." He paused to note the effect of his words.

"Yes?" she whispered, so softly that it might have been but the west wind stirring through the orange grove.

"At least you do not discourage me," he said. "Now, I want to say that in this new land of ours the greatest blessing is achievement. I do not recall ever wanting anything which I have not, sooner or later, secured. It is a habit of my countrymen to lay their plans in advance, and to carry them out in the face of opposition."

He glanced at the frantic face of Mrs. Whelpley peering from the car window. Editha could not see it. She did not appear anxious to look in that direction.

The conductor struck the starting gong beside the door of the depot restaurant.

"All aboard!" he cried.

"You were about to say?" Editha asked, eagerly.

"That I want you to miss that train!"

"Why, what would I do? I haven't so much as a penny to my person!" she exclaimed.

"I will take you as you are," he persisted. "I don't want your money."

"Oh, I didn't mean that. What I meant was that I've no way of providing for myself, if I miss the train," she explained, with a roguish smile.

"Yes, you have," he insisted, stubbornly.

"And that?"

"Is to marry me?"

Editha jumped from the auto with a low cry of alarm. The train was already in motion, and she had an excellent view of Mrs. Whelpley, the very picture of a disappointed chaperone, looking from the rear end of the last car.

Editha had missed the train, but John Paul was at her side. Turning toward him, she said: "Well, I did my best!"

And the two rode off in the auto to solve the problem in the most desirable way.

By a Circuitous Route.

"Mr. Spotsash," said the bookkeeper, "I'm to be married at noon to-morrow, and I'd like to have the day off."

"That will be all right, Mr. Addendum. But aren't you going to take any wedding trip?"

"Yes, sir. We're going to the ball game in the afternoon."

Depends Upon the Viewpoint.

"So, Tommie, you wish to be excused from school this afternoon?"

"Yes, sir."

"Is your excuse a good one or is it baseball?"

"Both, ma'am."

LONG LIVES OF SOLDIERS.

Many Instances of Longevity Among Those Who Have Faced the Greatest Perils.

Soldiers of the revolution can be remembered by men who are not to-day in their old age. Several of the rear guard of the continental army saw striking episodes of the revolution and were able to narrate them when more than 70 years had passed. Benjamin Abbott, a drum major, who beat the death march at Maj. Andre's execution, died at Nashua, N. H., in 1851. Peter Besoncon, who was one of Lafayette's followers, and who died at Warsaw, N. Y., in 1855, is believed to have been the longest surviving witness of Andre's death, which occurred October 2, 1780.

The annals of many countries bear witness to occasional instances of longevity in those whose business "tis to die." Samuel Gibson, who was a soldier at Waterloo, died December 15, 1891, aged 101. Who was the last Waterloo officer is the subject of considerable doubt, but the distinction was claimed for Lieut. Maurice Shea, who died February 5, 1892, and who fell short one year of being a centenarian. Veteran sailors are almost as common as veteran soldiers. Admiral Sir Provo Wallis, who died February 13, 1892, in his one hundred and first year, was one of the lieutenants of the Shannon when she captured the Chesapeake in 1813. Rear Admiral Thomas O. Selfridge, the elder, of our own navy, who was born in 1804, was a rival of Wallis in length of days.

Lives that span the historic past and the present are commoner than are generally supposed. On June 18 the son of a revolutionary soldier took part in decorating at Sanguis the graves of his father's comrades.

SAVED BY WATCH CHARM.

Leader Pellet. Instead of Inflicting Fatal Wound, Was Deflected—Lodged in Telegraph Pole.

A watch charm of the Masonic variety, dented with a bullet, now hangs in a window in the Kimball house block, where it is under the observation of all passersby who care to see it. That piece of gold upon which is carved the figures emblematic of the secret order saved the life of W. R. Nash, a well-known Geologist at Woodberry.

Descriptive stories of the duel at that place, in which James Clark used his pistol promiscuously, have been printed. In the gathering when lead was flying thickest and fastest was W. R. Nash. A bullet from Clark's pistol struck a watch charm swinging in front of Nash's vest.

The charm gave the leaden pellet a deflection, and instead of penetrating the body the bullet glanced to the left and, clipping the flesh on that side, went on its course until it found its way into a telegraph pole, from which it was subsequently dug.

The charm was badly battered and Mr. Nash, its owner, brought it with him to Atlanta to have it replaced in its setting, from which it had been knocked by the bullet. He carried it to a Kimball house block jeweler, from whom he purchased it originally and by whom it was placed on exhibition.—Atlanta Constitution.

His Argument.

The old gentleman showed his displeasure plainly.

"It seems to me," he said, "rather presumptuous for a youth in your position to ask for my daughter's hand. Can you advance any good reason why I should give my consent?"

"Yes, sir," replied the young man promptly.

"What?"

"I am comparatively modest and economical in the matter of my personal expenditures, and I think you will find me less costly to maintain than any other son-in-law you could very well pick out."—Judge.

STATE AUDITOR

S. W. Hager Opened His Campaign At Mt. Sterling.

CANDIDATE FOR DEMOCRATIC NOMINATION FOR GOVERNOR OF KENTUCKY.

STEWARSHIP.

I require all corporate interests to bear their proportion of taxes—the values of corporate franchises have been increased and that without oppression. I encourage and invite capital to this State and I note with pleasure much foreign capital seeking investment here. My campaign will be conducted on a high plane—no word of abuse shall be among my utterances. This is a contest for supremacy within a Democratic household.

In the Teachers Registers and Trustees' Record Books question arose as to which class that character of work belonged, and Hon. Clifton J. Pratt, then Attorney General of Kentucky, decided that work belonged to the second class and was paid for according to contract under that class. An investigating committee exonerated the Board and fixed the blame, if any, upon the terms of the law.

The Fiscal Court of the State corroborated General Pratt and the Board.

STATE CAPITOL ARCHITECTS.

We are charged with contracting at $40,000 when we could have gotten architect for $16,000. The $16,000 architect was never before committee and no one voted for his plan. A cheaper architect may have been employed but the Commission sought the best because Kentucky deserved to realize the best men can buy. A result that would be fitting: Increase of taxation, an increase in the amount of revenue collected is true. The State population has increased ten per cent, during the time mentioned and the cost of everything the State as consumer must buy has greatly increased. The Legislature fixes both the amount and sources of tax income and how it shall be expended.

Extraordinary expenditures during my term of office by special appropriations of the Legislature have been $75,000 to World's Fair, $15,000 annually to State College, $15,000 to Children's Home, $15,000 to State Fair, $57,000 to Confederate Veterans' Home and by increasing school term from five to six months and other smaller appropriations.

I am second to none in adherence to the principle that public office is a public trust and that money taken from the pockets of the people for the administration of the affairs of Government is a trust sacred in its nature and no dollar should be expended except in obedience to law, and that strict economy should be observed in public expenditure.

The attorney fees on contract I have paid since coming into office as Auditor amount to $75,000. Regarding salary rebates, the Legislature exonerated me, using the following language: "It has been shown to us by undenied statements that the Auditor knew nothing about either the agreement made between Salmon and Thompson or that Franklin was sending $50.00 per month to the widow of the man that formerly held the position."

Relative to the Insurance Department the Legislative Committee said: "Our attention was next directed to the Insurance Department. We found that department managed as, in our opinion, it should be managed; that there was no more help in that department than was necessary, and that the salaries were reasonable and just."

For the victories achieved while chairman of Campaign Committee the 2,000 precinct committeemen and Democratic press share with me in honor and praise.

In closing Judge Hager said: "My fellow Democrats, I believe that our party is equal to present and future responsibilities involved in directing the affairs of this great State."

Distrustful of my ability, yet offering all that I have, I am before you as a candidate for Governor—not, I beg you to believe, as the candidate of any man or set of men or of any clique or machine, but as one who, having rendered his party and the State the most faithful and devoted service in his power, comes before the people with a pledge to serve the interests of the State and all the people, should success crown his ambition to be your Governor. I, therefore, ask your earnest consideration of my canvas and the expression of your free and independent support in the coming primary, at which it will become your privilege and your duty to choose your standard bearers for the approaching State election, and whatever verdict you may render I shall cheerfully accept it as the will of my party and will exercise all the energies of my being to insure the triumph of the ticket that you, in your sovereign wisdom, may choose to nominate.

DIALECTS DYING OUT.

Suggested in England That Phonograph Be Employed in Preservation of Old Languages.

Although nothing can be done to prevent the decay of local dialects, much can be done to preserve their records. The phonograph is being applied for this purpose both in Guernsey and in the Isle of Man. The dialect language in the former is Norman-French in the latter Manx, one of the Gaelic group.

It is believed that in the Isle of Man, with the passing away of the present generation, no one will be found to speak the dialect. The phonograph is being sent to different parts of the island by the Manx Language society; old men whose accent is pure will speak into the receiver, and the records are to be stored at Douglas.

Mr. E. D. Marquand says that the old Norman language still spoken in the Channel islands is in its main features the same as that used by the cultured classes of England eight centuries ago; the tongue in which Taillefer sang the "Chanson de Roland" at the battle of Hastings.

"In Alderney," he says, "it will certainly have become extinct in a very few years. In Guernsey it will probably linger on for a generation or two. In Jersey Norman French will survive longest, owing partly to the larger size of the island, partly to its proximity to France, and partly also to the influx of French agricultural laborers, who spend some months each year during the farmers' busy season."

Mr. Marquand proposes using the phonograph to preserve records of the dialect poems, folk songs and folk lore of the island.

TOO MUCH EMPHASIS.

Complaint That the Average Young Girl To-Day Converses Principally in Italics.

The average young girl converses principally in Italics.

She is a prodigal in emphasis and a spendthrift in superlatives. Her joy is in hyperbole. She thrives to force the conviction of her young charms on her hearers simply by stress of voice and exaggerated phraseology, says the New Orleans Picayune.

A thing of mediocre charm must needs be "perfectly lovely," with strong emphasis on both words. All adverbs are overworked in her painstaking enthusiasm, until "perfectly" is reduced to the verge of nervous prostration.

She is "simply crazy" over chocolate sundae, and her new hat is "absolutely luscious."

A dull occasion is "ghastly" and a pleasant time is "grand." She is "bored to extinction" with the greatest facility and she "collapses" at the slightest misadventure.

The fit of an unsuccessful gown is "weird" or "beasty." She is literally "paralyzed" to find it so late and "scared stiff" at a sudden noise.

She simply "howls" instead of laughing and finds a very commonplace situation "killing."

"Like" and "dislike" in her vocabulary are ousted by "love" and "hate"—both invariably underscored. She "loves hot ginbread" and she "hates chif- ruffles," says an exchange.

In fact, she so recklessly squanders her verbal resources that there is nothing left her for genuine emotional emergency. "When she gets there the cupboard will be bare" and the poor girl will have to keep dumb.

Youthful Gallant.

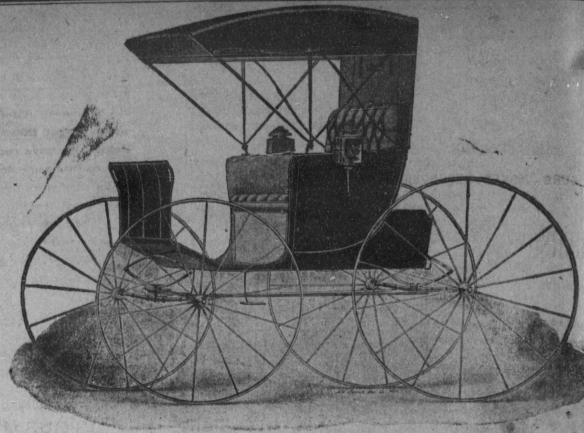

It is reasonably safe to assume from a story in the New York Tribune that the late Henry Harland, the novelist, was seldom kept after school in his boyhood.

Among Harland's early teachers was a charming young lady, who called him up in class one morning and said to him:

"Henry, name some of the chief beauties of education."

"Schoolmistresses," the boy answered, smiling into his teacher's pretty eyes.

A man is rich when he has what he really needs.

Fair For Lexington.

September 17 is the date for the beginning of the Blue Grass Fair. Having lost the State Fair the business people of Lexington are determined to hold a fair which in comparison with those of the past is to be the climax. They have already from private subscription about $20,000 and will only stop when the projectors are satisfied that they have enough to make this the Fair of the State. The man who did more for the success of the State Fair at Lexington last year, Mr. Geo. A. Bain, has been secured for Secretary, and is ardently at work. Stockmen of all have been seen and their exhibits will be made at Lexington. Amusements and fine music have been secured. The railroads have given a one-way rate. Mr. Jonett Shouse is Press Agent and therefore the fair will certainly be a success.

Rev. J. D. Hancock, of Princeton, N. J., will preach at the Southern Presbyterian Church next Sabbath morning at 11 o'clock. Miss Mary Lockridge will sing.

Beginning with Wednesday the city will be filled with visitors attending the Bracken Association of Baptists. The Association sermon will be preached Wednesday evening Rev. M. B. Adams, of Frankfort, president of the antisaloon league, will be present and deliver an address of interest to our people. Representative active state-workers will be present.

Rev. Meacham preached at the Union service on Sunday evening. His central thought was that religious men are largely responsible for the existence of the saloon in our city by reason of patronage extended. He with many others deeply lament the fact. O, that men who have named the name of Christ would depart from evil and have no fellowship with the works of darkness.

The chief incentive for the assembly of christians on the Lord's day should be the remembrance of the Christ who died as an atonement for sin. On Sunday morning there was no preaching at the Christian Church, the pastor, Bro. Clark, being away. As usual with this congregation, the communion service was held. J. D. Hazelrigg presided. His thoughts were so appropriate and helpful that we are pleased to give our readers the benefit of them:

The fifty-third chapter of Isaiah, describing with minute particularity the circumstances attending the crucifixion of our Lord, was written many hundreds of years prior to the occurrence of the world's greatest of all tragedies, the tragedy at Golgotha.

And this memorial ordinance, sacred to the memory of Jesus Christ, and which we are here today to celebrate, has been for more than 1800 years ever witness to the atoning death of our Lord, as the most stupendous fact, as it is the best attested fact, of all history.

These symbols of his broken body and shed blood, set forth not only the fact of the exceeding sinfulness of sin, since it could only be atoned for at such infinite cost, but they declare the further fact that we are sinners. And, more than that, they remind us of our utter helplessness—our absolute insufficiency in and of ourselves to retrieve our fallen fortunes. And so we should come around this board, feeling that if we are ever saved at all, it will have been through the abounding mercy of our God in Jesus Christ or Lord; feeling that we are "sinners and nothing at all, but that Jesus Christ is all in all."

From the very necessities of the situation, we are shut up to the acceptance of Christ as our Saviour; else we are "without hope and without God in the world." He comes to us saying, "I am the resurrection and the life; he that liveth and believeth in Me though he were dead, yet shall he live again;" "and whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die." "Come unto me all ye ends of the earth and be saved." And finally we get a vision of the thorn crowned Christ, with his pierced hands and feet, and bleeding side, and with sorrowful face, ever pleading with pathetic insistence that we accept, at His hands, life and peace. None other ever offered to save us; none other ever died to save us.

It is, as one drowning at sea, helpless, hopeless, but for the life-line thrown for rescue. To refuse to only offer we have or shall have, to spurn the proffered help of our only Saviour is not only madness—it is eternal doom!

And now, in this service, as we eat this bread of life, and drink this royal wine of Heaven, we may look up to the glorified and enthroned Christ as our brother and our Lord; for he has become unto us, wisdom and righteousness, sanctification and redemption.

Estill Springs.

The truth is abroad that Estill Springs this year has one of the best bands of music of any summer resort in the South, the Jenkins orchestra of Louisville; the cuisine one of the cleanest and best prepared without restriction to expense or labor. Last week the State tennis tournament was conducted in the presence of great crowds, the prizes of silver and gold and copper loving cups attracting the best players from in and out of the State. Guests praise the new proprietors, the Messrs. Riddell, and declare that Estill never was prettier or more largely attended than this season.

The Most Popular Chew Made

There is real enjoyment in chewing SCHNAPPS tobacco. That's why it has won millions of chewers every year, until now more is sold than all similar tobaccos.

SCHNAPPS, the most popular product of the Reynolds factories, is manufactured in the very heart of the Piedmont tobacco belt, known to the world as producing tobacco with an aroma so delightful and appetizing that it introduced and popularized the chewing of tobacco.

The Clean, Pure Chew

is manufactured by the cleanest and most healthful processes ever devised, under the direction of men who have made the chewing tobacco business a life study, and who have managed the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company since 1875.

Only choice selections of thoroughly cured leaf are used in SCHNAPPS, and expert tests prove that this class of tobacco requires and takes a smaller amount of sweetening than any other kind of tobacco grown—and that it has a wholesome, stimulating and satisfying effect on chewers, besides being the most economical.

There are a great many imitations claiming to be "just as good" as

BRYAN IN LONDON.

Sixteen to One Not An Issue—Now Platform So Plain That All May Understand.

A London interview of Mr. Bryan:

"I notice that I am now described by some as conservative, and in order that there may be no misunderstanding on that subject, permit me to say that in one sense I always have been a conservative. If, however, by the word conservative they mean that I have changed my position on any public question or moderated my opposition to corporate aggrandizement, they have a surprise waiting for them. I am more radical than I was in 1896 and have nothing to withdraw on economic questions which have been under discussion. I believe in bimetallism and that the restoration of silver would bring still further prosperity, besides restoring parity in exchange between gold and silver-using countries; but I recognize as do all other bimetallicists whom I have met abroad, that the unexpected and unprecedented increase in gold production has for the present removed the silver question as an issue. In 1900 some came back who were against us in 1896 and we did not shut the door against them. I have no idea that the party will require tickets of admission in the coming campaign. I do not know that we can find a better plan than the Bible plan, which admits the eleventh-hour comer to a place in the vineyard and to share the reward with those who began earlier. I think this sound politics as well as sound religion, provided the new recruit comes to work and not to interfere with the other laborers."

Accidents will happen, but the best regulated families keep Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil for such emergencies. It subdues the pain and heals the hurt. 514t.

COURT OF APPEALS

PROTECTS LOCAL OPTION TERRITORY.

Express Company Can Not Carry Liquor As Inter State Commerce.

FRAUD EXPOSED.

The Demise of The Mail Order Liquor Business.

For a long time past the Adams Express Company, and possibly others, have been acting as the agents of mail order liquor dealers and aiding and abetting them in violating our local option laws. Recently the grand jury of Knox County indicted the said Express Company on several counts for such violations. The local courts imposed heavy fine, and the Kentucky Court of Appeals affirmed the judgment.

The evidence showed that unscrupulous dealers in whiskey, by a general system, through the aid of the express company, constantly and largely violated the local option laws of the state. Through this system the names of the "thirty" ones in a community were obtained by the dealers, and without any order or contract, whiskey in gallon packages were sent to each of them. In some way the fact was conveyed to the thirty one, and he hastened to the express office, paid the express charges plus the price of the whiskey, and proceeded to slake his thirst.

The agent if the express company pocketed his commission on the sale and sent the balance to the express company. They in turn, deducted their carrying charge and paid what was left to the whiskey dealer. The defense of the express company was that the goods were shipped from another state, and therefore an interstate transaction. The court held that inter-state commerce cannot be based upon fraud or chicanery, but must necessarily be a legitimate transaction.

"The constitution and statutes of the United States are not shields for criminals; nor do they furnish a means by which crime may be effectuated. The transaction which took place between Cincinnati and Barberville bears the same resemblance to interstate commerce as the waves of a green-gold man bear to the genuine money of the United States: both are mere counterfeits."

The court further declared that in its very substance the unknown consignor, whose business is a lockbox in the Cincinnati postoffice, simply appointed the Adams' Express Company as his agent to find for him a purchaser in Knox county for a gallon of whiskey at a given commission. It further says that there is no common law duty devolving upon a common carrier to act as the collecting agent of the consignor; that it is a matter of private contract and one in which the carrier may enter or refuse at his option.

Judge Barker, who delivered the opinion of the court took occasion to score both the local agent and the express company. He declared that it was impossible that both did not know that the transaction was not only illegal but criminal, and that they were the paid accomplices of the criminal signors.

He concludes by saying that he does not believe that an express company can thus legitimately thrust the shadow of its greed between the people and their right to protect themselves.

Again has our appellate court spoken in no uncertain tone on the question of the liquor traffic, and in thus doing has honored itself and the people of the state as well. With our railroads refusing on their own volition to transport liquor into places where the people have said they do not want it, and our court of final resort declaring that express companies, shall not do it, it does look like the people ought to be able to take care of the blind tiger and boot-legger. The argument that to put out the saloon opens the way for the illegal seller, seems to be a back number in Kentucky. To use it will be a severe reflection on ones intelligence — The Kentucky Issue.

"Suffered day and night the torment of itching piles. Nothing helped me until I used Doan's Ointment. It cured me permanently." Hon. John R. Garrett, Mayor, Girard, Ala. 514t.

The great peril that threatens the body politic and the Church just now is the saloon, the organized liquor traffic. With its greedy palm on law makers, with its ban on decency, with its power to break law defiantly, it is the threat of the American Republic.

The license of the last saloon in Estill county expired recently, which puts that county in the dry list.

The people of Mt. Sterling and vicinity appreciate the great advantage W. S. Lloyd obtained for them in getting the Dr. Howard Co. to allow the regular 50 cent size of Dr. Howard's specific for the cure of constipation and dyspepsia, to be sold at half price, 25 cents, and have bought hundreds of bottles.

Many orders have come by mail at this popular price, for it is very unusual to be able to buy six doses of standard medicine for half price.

Every bottle of the specific sold by W. S. Lloyd has his personal guarantee to refund the money if it was not satisfactory, but none has come back, showing the wonderful curative power of this remedy.

Useful ordinary medicines for constipation and dyspepsia, the dose of Dr. Howard's specific is reduced after a few days use, and the cure is soon complete and lasting.
